Network Co-Sponsors Interfaith Service For Peace & Unity One Year After 9/11/01

Members of many different religious communities gathered for an Interfaith Service for Peace and Unity one year after the terrible events of September 11, 2001. The service, sponsored by the Network of Religious Communities, the American Muslim Council, the Jewish Federation of Greater Buffalo and the National Conference for Community and Justice was held in the Atrium of Erie Community College, City Campus, on September 11, 2002.

The service included comments from three persons who had direct experience at the site of the World Trade Center. Words and expressions of peace, unity, and hope were offered by representatives of Muslim, Jewish, Hindu, Sikh, Unitarian, Baha'i, Native American and Christian religions. Periods of silence marked the times when the airliners struck the World Trade Center.

The service was a living testimony to the best of our religious traditions, enabling us to share our sorrow, standing with those who are inappropriately accused, lifting us from despair to hope and empowering us to go forth again into the world to work for peace.

A Response to Remarks Made by Reverend Jerry Falwell on CBS's 60 Minutes

—Peter Allen Weinmann

President, Buffalo/Niagara Chapter, The American Jewish Committee

Recently, Rev. Jerry Falwell made some incendiary comments while being interviewed for CBS's 60 Minutes, referring to Islam as a "violent religion," and its prophet Mohammed as "a terrorist" and "war-like." Sadly, Falwell confuses fundamentalist Islamic terrorists with millions of peace-loving mainstream Moslems—at least two million whom are American.

Falwell's bigoted comments are simply and utterly destructive in a world where people of goodwill are trying to reverse others' impulses toward extremism and intolerance. To smear an entire religion—and its millions of adherents—with such false and defamatory comments is wrong. Moreover, such religious hatred clearly violates Judeo-Christian teachings of charity, compassion, and justice. Martin Luther King, Jr. once said that intolerance anywhere is a threat to tolerance everywhere. Falwell's comments—intolerant to their core—are anathema to anyone who desires God's great gift, the gift of Peace.

Religious Leaders Seek Better Buffalo Common Council Reduction Plan

On October 3, 2002, Religious Leaders For Peace With Justice met at the Zion Missionary Baptist Church, 179 East Ferry Street, in Buffalo, New York. The following statement was released to the media.

“We are religious leaders serving congregations, mosques, temples and religious organizations in the Buffalo Area. We care deeply about the people who live in the City of Buffalo and its surrounding cities and towns. We are well aware of the financial realities facing the City of Buffalo, the County of Erie and the State of New York. We are committed to joining with all persons of good will to build a just, healthy and vital community and region.

Because we care deeply about the future of Buffalo and Western New York we believe we must oppose the proposition, which will appear on the November ballot, to reduce the size of the Buffalo Common Council. As individual citizens we will vote NO on the referendum proposition. As religious leaders we will counsel the members of our congregations and religious organizations to vote NO on the proposition to reduce the Buffalo Common Council to nine members.

We take this action because we seek:

1. A plan that will strengthen our community rather than racially divide the City of Buffalo and Western New York.
2. A just and fair plan that, while reducing the size of the Buffalo Common Council, will ensure that every citizen has a voice and a vote that counts.”

Environment and Religion

—The Reverend Charles Lamb
Member of the Youngstown/Lewiston Clergy Group
Retired NE Regional Minister of the Disciples of Christ

It is a religious duty to work to protect the environment. Many Scriptures emphasize that humans have a responsibility to care for creation in behalf of the Creator, and not to despoil it. People in almost every religious tradition would agree with this sentiment.

Even without such Scriptures, we know instinctively that nature is precious. A pure mountain stream, a sunset in a clear sky, or a healthy forest, all speak to our souls of the importance of preserving our earthly home.

Today is the time for religious people, for all people of good will, to come forward to defend the environment because it is under relentless attack. The Bush administration has proven itself an enemy of the environment, and we read almost daily of new attempts to undermine or remove controls to protect our air, water, forests, and health.

We were one of the few nations in the world that refused to sign the Kyoto protocol to reduce global warming. President Bush halted the “roadless rule” prohibiting new roads in national forests, which would open up more areas for timbering.

Despite his promise to enforce clean air standards, the president reneged on his campaign promise to cause polluting coal factories to install new pollution control devices when they remodeled. His so-called “Clean Skies” act actually weakens current clean air protections. The attempt by some in Congress to force automobile makers to build cars with greater fuel efficiency was resisted by the president and, largely due to pressure from his office, defeated by Congress.

Recently the Bush administration urged that mining companies be permitted to dump the residue of their excavations into creeks and streams. The decision to withdraw funding from many agencies that work for population control ignores the fact that out-of-control growth of population inevitably leads to more environmental destruction. The list goes on and on.

Religious people, people who have convictions that the earth and water and air are God’s and are to be used carefully and preserved for future generations, have a duty to cry out that this must stop. This is not “meddling in politics.” This is religious people, consistent with their calling and Biblical mandates, speaking out against injustice and working for righteousness. Fighting to protect the environment is a religious duty: failing to do so is to betray one’s own religion.

Food Pantry Volunteers Share Their Story

Jean and Dave Schnirel, members of Kenmore United Methodist Church, share their experience as regular volunteers at the Network of Religious Communities Food Pantry:

“What is it like to be a volunteer at the Network Food Pantry? It’s an adventure! No two days are alike. There is always opportunity for service and ministry.

Our adventure started 3-1/2 years ago when we wanted to use some of our retirement time helping people. The pantry had been closed for several days due to a big storm. When it reopened, 43 families crowded the hall and waited while we furiously bagged food to meet the demand. This was a most unusual day. It certainly got us into the spirit of helping others and affirmed that we were needed.

1000-1200 people receive food each month at the Network Food Pantry. These are the numbers. We see the faces. The faces belong to people who have had fires, have had wallets and purses stolen, have lost jobs, have entry level jobs and are trying to survive, and those who are physically, emotionally, or mentally ill. The need is great. It’s always a struggle to have enough food and volunteers.

It’s the people who come here and the people who work here that make volunteering here special. Consider joining us in the adventure of God’s work.

The schedule is flexible. The pantry is open Monday-Friday, 9:30 a.m.-1:00 p.m. There are referrals to process, food to bag, phones to answer. Call 882-4793 for more information. We hope to be working with you soon.”

Please help the Network Food Pantry continue its work so that families and individuals seeking help will not be turned away. Volunteers, nonperishable food items, and monetary contributions are always needed.

- Anyone interested in volunteering should call the Network office at 716-882-4793.
- Food donations can be delivered to the pantry at 1272 Delaware Avenue, Buffalo, between 9:30 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. any weekday—or, to make other arrangements for delivery, call the Network office.
- Monetary donations allow for the purchase of food as needed to supplement food donations. Checks should be clearly marked “Food Pantry” and made payable to and mailed to the Network of Religious Communities, 1272 Delaware Avenue, Buffalo, NY 14209-2496.

New Food Stamp Guidelines Effective October 1

On May 13, 2002, President Bush signed into law the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002, which includes the Food Stamp Reauthorization Act of 2002—the nutrition title of the Farm Bill. This adds $6.4 billion in new funds to the Food Stamp Program and other nutrition programs over the next ten years, through a number of program enhancements and simplifications. The new law expands eligibility for some groups. For some it increases the grant amount. More sweepingly, the law gives states new flexibility to improve the Food Stamp program for their low-income residents. Most of its provisions took effect October 1, 2002, although some phase in later. Following are some specific changes to the Food Stamp Program:

Gross Income Guidelines:

Household Size	Gross Monthly Income
1	$960
2	$1,294
3	$1,628
4	$1,961
5	$2,295
6	$2,629
7	$2,962
8	$3,296
Each additional member	+ $334

Resource Rules: Each adult is allowed one registered vehicle to use for work, school or for seeking employment. A teenager is also allowed one vehicle for work or seeking employment. Households with members 60 years of age and older and disabled members are allowed up to $3,000 in resources.

Standard Deduction: The standard deduction for households of five persons will be $147 and for households of six or more persons will be $168. Households of fewer than five will continue to receive the $134 standard deduction.

Transitional Food Stamps: Households leaving Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) will receive Food Stamps for five months after their case is closed.

Reporting: Food Stamp clients no longer have to report changes before their six-month recertification unless their gross income exceeds 130 percent of poverty. This rule does not apply to cash assistance households, households with no income, SSI recipients in group homes, seasonal migrant farm workers, those with a certification period of less than six months, and homeless households.

Restoration of Eligibility to Certain Immigrants: Effective October 1, 2002, disabled qualified immigrants are eligible for Food Stamps. Effective April 1, 2003, qualified immigrants will become eligible after they have lived in the U.S. for five years. Effective October 1, 2003, all qualified immigrant children will be eligible.

For additional information on determining Food Stamp eligibility, call the Food For All office at 716-882-7705. Food For All is a program of the Network of Religious Communities.

Chaos, Cooperation and the Reality of the Eternal

—The Reverend G. Stanford Bratton
Co-Executive Director, Network of Religious Communities

It has been a chaotic and difficult year. We have experienced the attacks on September 11th, the dramatic decline of the stock market, the proposed war with Iraq, the increasing national and state budget deficits with their impact upon welfare, health care and local governmental services and the sniper shootings near Washington D.C. Locally, the potential Seneca Nation of Indians Casinos in Niagara Falls and Buffalo, the arrest of the six men from Lackawanna and the conflict over Buffalo Common Council downsizing have dominated the news.

It has been a particularly challenging year for organizations like the Network of Religious Communities. In a time when people are suspicious of strangers, seek safety and security, experience the desire for revenge and think first of their own families and communities, we are called to foster understanding, seek common ground, facilitate cooperation and enable religious organizations to work together for peace, justice and the common good.

Often during the past year I have thought of the old adage “when the going gets tough, the tough get going.” That phrase, I have come to conclude, is more than a rallying cry for persons engaged in interreligious and ecumenical cooperation; it gives expression to key beliefs and teachings that lie at the heart of our many religious communities.

This fall I reacquainted myself with a book written fifty years ago by the noted preacher Harry Emerson Fosdick. Dr. Fosdick begins A Faith for Tough Times with the pronouncement that “The Eternal is Real!” He says, “Just such chaotic times as these can light up religious faith’s profoundest meaning: its assertion that this fugitive earthly scene is permeated with the eternal; that transiency is not the last word in this universe.” Dr. Fosdick’s words remind us that the motivation for our efforts is not rooted in the events described by CNN and the Buffalo News, nor even our own passions, but in the sacred writings of our religious traditions which point us toward a reality that lies beyond the chaos of the present.

It is the sacred writings of our religious traditions, pointing toward what is really real, that calls us to our essential task of building bridges, caring for the most vulnerable in our midst, and working together for justice, peace and the common good. Likewise, our success is not measured by the standards of the chaotic present, but by a higher reality revealed to us through the sacred scriptures and writings of our particular religious tradition.

Recently, I had the opportunity to hear Imam Wallace D. Mohammad, head of the Muslim American Society, speak at Buffalo State College. I was amazed at his enthusiasm when he spoke about the unprecedented levels of understanding and cooperation which he sees occurring among the leaders of the great world religions. His enthusiasm was not tampered by events of the present nor concerns about the survival of Islam; he spoke as one who had seen a vision of the eternal which can and will transform this earth and all of us who call it our home. For Imam Wallace D Mohammed the Eternal is Real.

U.S. Navy Offers Opportunity For Clergy

Whether on land or thousands of miles out to sea, members of the Chaplain Corps are the spiritual and emotional guides for a large and diverse group of Sailors, Marines, Coastguardsmen, and their families. Members of the clergy play a vital role in helping their fellow sea service personnel negotiate the crucial moments of their lives. They provide moral support for young people away from home for the first time, lend advice to individuals facing personal or emotional difficulties and provide spiritual assistance to people from all walks of life.

Navy chaplains serve on ships and at foreign and domestic bases throughout various Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard commands. As a Navy chaplain, some of your responsibilities may be to:

- Conduct worship services in a variety of settings;
- Perform religious rites and ceremonies such as weddings and funeral services;
- Counsel individuals who seek guidance;
- Oversee religious education programs, such as Sunday school and youth groups;
- Visit and provide spiritual guidance and care to hospitalized personnel and/or their family members;
- Train lay leaders who conduct religious education programs;
- Promote attendance at religious services, retreats and conferences.

The Navy accepts clergy from over 100 denominations and faith groups. Qualified applicants must be U.S. citizens at least 21 years of age; meet certain medical and physical fitness standards; hold a B.A. or B.S. degree, with not less than 120 semester hours from a qualified educational institution; and hold a post-baccalaureate graduate degree, which includes 72 semester hours of graduate-level course work in a field of theological or related studies. At least one-half (i.e. 36) of these hours must include topics in general religion, theology, religious philosophy, ethics, and/or the foundational writings from one's religious tradition. Accredited distance-education graduate programs are acceptable. Chaplains then attend the Navy Chaplain School in Newport, R.I. for a basic orientation course.

The Navy also has a "Chaplain Candidate Program Officer" (CCPO) program for seminary students who might be interested in obtaining a commission before completing their graduate studies. The CCPO program offers significant pay advantages once a chaplain enters active duty. The program also includes on-the-job training under the direct supervision of an active duty chaplain.

The Chaplain Corps is a high-profile community where you will have the opportunity to practice a full scope of religious ministry. In addition to the excellent training and preparation in religious and administrative positions you'll receive, you will also have the chance to see many places and meet many people you'll remember for the rest of your life.

According to Captain Vince Arnold, Chaplain Program Manager, Navy Chaplains have a tremendous opportunity to aid members of the sea services as they navigate uncharted waters. "You don't have to know everything. It's a challenging ministry that I refer to as 'not for the faint at heart.' While many in the sea services may be familiar with navigation via the aid of satellite-based GPS, there is always a need for the ultimately more reliable celestial navigation."

bers to foster the rights of every individual, and in the atmosphere of today, particularly the Muslim community, to practice their religion in an environment that is free from fear or persecution.'

We are not unmindful of the widespread concern for safety and security in the aftermath of the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001. Nevertheless, we remember that many of our own religious communities were once viewed as 'strange,' 'suspicious,' or 'dangerous.' We ask the entire community of Western New York to remember that we enjoy the freedom to worship as we choose because we live in freedom, with due process of law and the political covenant that allows each of us to be different from the rest.

Western New York has been blessed by all its people, races, ethnic groups, and religious traditions. We cherish this diversity and witness to its fruitfulness by our belonging to each other in the Network of Religious Communities."
